USD 475 is prepared for the upcoming school year

USD 475 leaders and staff have spent the spring and summer working to conduct school amidst the COVID-19 pandemic. Deb Gustafson, Executive Director of Student Service, told a gathering of local health and Fort Riley leaders on Wednesday, "We're about as ready as we can be."

Gustafson explained that students attending school in USD 475 buildings this fall will wear face masks, undergo temperature checks on arrival at school, and will practice regular hand washing and use sanitizer stations. It's all part of the mitigation plan for the district.

Gustafson made it clear it will not be business as usual in 2020. She noted that COVID-19 has kind of held the education system hostage but the District is dealing with it, and there is a need to mitigate.

Gustafson stressed the need for help from medical affiliate partners in the community. She also noted that early in the school year it will take two to three weeks to get used to the new protocols and procedures in place.

Classes for students begin Monday in USD 475.
